

Race, Hispanic Origin, and Ancestry

Why, What, and How

Why will Census 2000 Ask About Race, Hispanic Origin, and Ancestry?

- People who answer the census help their communities obtain federal funds and valuable information for planning schools, hospitals, and roads.

Census information also helps identify areas where residents might need services of particular interest to certain racial or ethnic groups, such as screening for hypertension or diabetes.

- All levels of government need information on race, Hispanic origin, and ancestry to implement and evaluate programs, such as Native American Programs Act, Equal Employment Opportunity Act, Civil Rights Act, Voting Rights Act, Public Health Act, Healthcare Improvement Act, Job Partnership Training Act, Equal Credit Opportunity Act, Fair Housing Act, Census Redistricting Data Program, and others.

- Both public and private organizations use race, Hispanic origin, and ancestry information to find areas where groups may need special services and to plan and implement education, housing, health, and other programs that address these needs. For example, a school system might use this information to design cultural activities that reflect the diversity in their community. Or a business could use it to select the mix of merchandise it will sell in a new store.

- Everyone who answers the census is asked about race and Hispanic origin because this information is needed for areas as small as neighborhoods and city blocks.

- The ancestry question permits people to identify groups not listed in the race and Hispanic origin questions, such as Dominican, Lebanese, Cambodian, or Dutch. Ancestry is asked only on the long form—the longer questionnaire that goes out to one in six households. This sample is large enough to produce reliable information for all but the smallest areas.

Do American Indians and Alaska Natives Need to Answer the Question on Hispanic Origin?

Yes, the Hispanic origin question must be answered by EVERYONE. Those who are not of Hispanic origin are asked to mark the box "NO, not Spanish/Hispanic/Latino." People who are of Hispanic origin are asked to indicate the specific group they belong to: Cuban, Mexican, Puerto Rican, or other groups, such as Spanish, Honduran, or Venezuelan.

How Do American Indians and Alaska Natives Answer the Question on Race?

The individual who responds to the census decides what his or her racial identity is. For the first time ever, people answering the census will be able to select more than one racial category to indicate mixed racial heritage. The groups shown in the census race question collapse into the six race groups needed by the federal government: White, Black or African American, American Indian and Alaska Native, Asian, and Native Hawaiian and Other Pacific Islanders. People who mark the American Indian or Alaska Native category are asked to provide the name of their principal or enrolled tribe. People who say they are "Other Asian," "Other Pacific Islander," and/or "Some other race" are asked to also write in their race.

How Do Hispanics Answer the Race Question?

People of Hispanic origin may be of any race. Hispanics can choose one or more race categories, including White, Black or African American, American Indian and Alaska Native, Asian, and Native Hawaiian and Other Pacific Islanders. If someone does not identify with any of the specified race groups, he or she may mark the "Some other race" category and write in their race.

How Do American Indians and Alaska Natives Answer the Ancestry Question?

Ancestry refers to an individual's nationality, lineage, or the country in which the individual or the individual's parents or ancestors were born outside of the United States. Examples of ancestries are Polish, Jamaican, Egyptian, and Taiwanese. The ancestry is open-ended, allowing respondents to write in their lineage or ancestry.

Answering the Census Is Important, Easy, and Safe.

By law, the Census Bureau cannot share your individual records with others, including welfare agencies, the Immigration and Naturalization Service, the Internal Revenue Service, Bureau of Indian Affairs, tribal officials, tribal courts, housing authorities, tribal police, and the military. Anyone who breaks this law can receive up to five years in prison and $5,000 in fines. The law works. Millions of questionnaires were processed during the 1990s without any breach of trust.

Generations are counting on this.
Don't leave it blank.
